Montgomery County Recorder of Deeds Fights Fraud with Free Program

NORRISTOWN – Montgomery County Recorder of Deeds Jeanne Sorg today encouraged Montgomery County residents to sign up for FraudSleuth, a free monitoring program that helps protect their properties from thieves and forgers.

“With heightened concerns about fraud in other counties, the Montgomery County Recorder of Deeds office wants to ensure that we partner with homeowners to protect one of their most valuable asset—their properties,” Sorg said. “We have a free monitoring program called FraudSleuth that will alert homeowners when any documents are recorded against their property.”

FraudSleuth, a program powered by Kofile Technologies, is available to any Montgomery County homeowner. Similar to credit monitoring services that are widely available today, FraudSleuth sends e-mail alerts to participating homeowners when any documents are recorded in their name, or against a property. Homeowners can use that information to contact the proper authorities to get the matter resolved.

“Montgomery County may not see this issue as much as some of the bigger cities, but we want to be proactive in presenting a wide spread issue,” Sorg said. “That is why we are proud to offer this program, free of charge.

If you are a Montgomery County homeowner who would like more information about FraudSleuth, please call the Montgomery County Recorder of Deeds office at 610-278-3289 or visit www.montcopa.org/rod.

Jeanne Sorg assumed the office of Montgomery County Recorder of Deeds in 2016. She serves as a member of the Property Records Industry Association, the Montgomery Bar Association Realtor Liaison Committee, and the Legislative and Conference committees of the Pennsylvania Recorder of Deeds Association (PRODA). She is an alternate delegate representing PRODA for the Pennsylvania State Association of Elected County Officials. Sorg also serves as the mayor of Ambler Borough.
